The Conversation that Caused Mr. Owen to Object to the Cherokee Bill.

Washington Special to Philadelphia Press. The conversation to which Mr. Owen alluded was between J. Milton Turner and Congressman William H. Wade, from the Thirteenth district of Missouri. They met at the cigar-stand near the main entrance to the House floor, just before the colored convention at Indianapolis. Mr. Wade, who knows Turner very well, said: "Milton, you are no Democrat; you must be retting something for this work." Turner replied: "You bet by - I am." "But," said the centleman, "can't you stay with the old party! fou are leading the colored people into an memy's camp." "But, you see," said Turner, 'I've got the arrangements all made with Democrats, and I'm going down to Indianapolis and run that convention for Cleveland, and they are just going to pass my Cherokee claim. Then my nest is feathered. When that's over I am as much of a Republican as ever, and don't you let anybody on your side object when the bill

Nobody on the Democratic side to-day was ready to defend their bargain, and they dropped the subject like a hot potato. The amount in the bill is something over $80,000, of which Turner is to get 25, or as some say, 33 per cent. for passing the bill.

Meeting at Kentland.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal KENTLAND, Aug. 18 -This place was aflame with enthusiasm on Saturday night. An announcement in the weekly papers brought great crowds to town. Delegations came fifteen and twenty miles. From 400 to 600 came from Sheldon, Ill., a like number from Goodland, and a throng from the surrounding country. The avenue leading through the park was lined with torches fastened to the trees. Shortly before dusk a walnut pole 100 feet high was raised by the Republican young ladies and a handsome flag was presented by them to the Lincoln League Club. At 7:30 o'clock the procession was formed and by the time it got on the march there were a mile of torches in line. After the parade 5,000 people packed and crowded about the speaker's stand. After songs and music by the band Mr. John Ade, president of the meeting, introduced Mr. A. J. Beveridge. Mr. Beveridge opened the campaign with a ringing speech, enthusing the people, who cheered loud, long and often. His talk greatly pleased the soldiers.

Democrat Cheers for Jeff Davis.

special to the Indianapolis Journal. MARSHALL, Ill., Aug. 19 .- There was one strikingly significant incident at the big Demoeratic rally in Casey, last night. A man named Orndorff, from Vevay, Cumberland county, yelled lustily for Jeff Davis, as the procession moved along, and kept it up for some time. Finally, George McCrary, a Casey Republican, ordered him to stop. He refused, saying: "I'll holler for my man. This is a free country, and I'll holler for the man I most bonor. Hurrah for Jeff Davis." This was more than McCrary could stand, and he knocked Orndorff down. The latter was soon on his feet, and the two then had a rough and tumble fight and were only separated when Orndorff drew a knife. One Democrat. an old soldier, was heard to mutter, "Why don't they let him kill the beastly rebel?" And others made like remarks, while some looked the sentiments they were afraid to utter. This outrageous affair was quite a damper on the enthusiasm of the better-minded Democrats.

Meetings to Wabash County.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal WABASH, Ind., Aug. 19.-The Republican campaign in this section is being conducted with a degree of enthusiasm which is unparalleled. Last night Hon. Alex. Hess addressed a large audience at Bethel school-house, north of Roann. The speech made many votes.

A Widow's Fight with Bailiffs, the Latter Being Badly Worsted. Special to the Indianapolis Journal

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Aug. 18 .- An attempt of ejectment by three sheriff deputies failed in this city last evening, and a woman came out victorions. About eight months ago John Kennedy died, leaving a court judgment standing against him. His property was sold by the sheriff to satisfy the judgment to Tom Noland, who afterward sold to B. F. Crabbs. Just here is where the trouble seems to have originated. Mrs. Kennedy claims that Crabbs told her if she would not claim her third interest in the estate he would pay her the amount, and this would save her the expense of the law process. After the limit had expired for the widow to file her claim, she said Crabbs refused to pay her what he promised, and demanded possession of the property. She refused to "get out," and Crabbs obtained ejectment papers. The sheriff was in no hurry to serve the papers, and did not until obliged to do so. Yesterday afternoon the sheriff sent Charles Davis and two colored men to set her out in the street. This they preceded to do, and all went well until the neighbors began to collect and tell the widow to "assert her rights and stop the proceedings." This the widow finally proceeded to do, and she acted in a hurry, too. She suddenly closed and locked the front door, shutting herself and deputy Davis in the room. She had an oak board, and she used it on Davis in a vigorous manner. Davis was chased all over the house, and escaped through a window, glad to get away. After a long wrangle over the affair, one of the colored men got in the house and was in the act of carrying out a bureau when a son of Mrs. Kennedy threw him out in the yard. This ended the ejectment, and the deputies fled from the scene of turmoil. The neighbors soon put everything ck in the house, and have stood guard ever since, daring any person to attempt such a thing again. Thus the matter stands, and the widow

United Brethren Conference.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal COLUMBUS, Aug. 18.-The White River and Indiana conferences of the United Brethren Church are holding their quadrennial session at Hartsville, this county. The opening meeting was held last Wednesday, and there was an attendance on the first day of about 250 ministers. The venerable Bishop J. Dickson, of Chambersburg. Pa., is presiding. It has been the custom heretofore to hold the White River conference pefore the Indiana, but for convenience and pleasure the two decided to hold their sessions at the same time and place this year, but so have them arranged that they would not conflict with each other in their workings. It was arranged that the White River conference meet in the morning and the Indiana in the after-Wednesday forenoon the White River conference organized by electing A. Rector, chairman; N. Wolford, recording secretary; and R. Young, statistical secretary. The Indiana Conference organized in the afternoon. J. M. Fowler was elected chairman; J. F. Hodson, recording secretary, and Samuel Wertz, statistical secretary. Rev. L. W. Crawford was received on his transfer from the Tennessee Conference, and a number of young men were recommended to the conference for license to greach the gospel.

The session on Thursday morning opened with prayer by Rev. J. M. Kabrick, of Daleville, The reports of Elders Wilmore and Mc-New, ministers in charge of various fields of labor, were considered. These reports revealed the fact that a number of circuits lost considerable in membership during the past four years as compared with other years. The Indiana Conference held its session again in the afternoon and received reports from its presiding elders. On account of the severe drought in the southern part of the State last year the reports showed quite a decrease in the various financial interests. A large educational meeting was held in the college chapel on Thursday night The session of the White River Conference on Friday was chiefly occupied in receiving reports from the several committees. Rev. Z. McNew, Rev. A. C. Williams and Rev. J. M. Tharp were elected presiding elders.

The Indiana Conference, at their session held in the afternoon, elected Rev. J. M. Fowler, Rev. F. M. Demunbrun and Rev. A. W. Arford presiding elders. The sessions to-day were devoted to the transaction of routine business devoid of general interest. To-morrow morning Bishop Dickson will deliver a sermon in the college chapel. THE ALLEGED LUMBER TRUST.

Prominent Operators Deny that Any Combination of Interests Is Contemplated.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.-The Times this morning prints the following: "A number of lumbermen held a private meeting at the Grand Pacific last evening in conference upon the proposition to combine all the pine interests of Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota. Among those present was F. Weyrhouser, of Rock Island, who is at the head of the syndicate which controls nine billion feet of stumpage. Senator Sabin, F. U. Prince. J. C. O'Gormon and J. N. Scales, of Stillwater, Minn., took part in the conference. The combination has been acquiring new interests during the year, and there is plenty of capital behind it. Those present declined to be interviewed as to the objects of the conference, or as to what had been done."

H. E. Norton, of Winona, Minn., when asked yesterday, at the Grand Pacific Hotel, if he, Fred Weyrhouser and other Northwestern lumbermen, were not organizing to control the lumber production said: "I know very we'll that I am not helping to organize any such combination and I do not think any one else is. Mr. Weyrhouser is a very active man, and having such large interests he is watched wherever he goes. Things are attributed to him which he never does. Of course, whenever he sees a good bargain in pine lands, he buys them, and I have no doubt he has been buying recently, but not in connection with any other men, and he has no idea of forming a trust. At the time some sensational dispatches regarding the organization were sent out from Minneapolis, Mr. Weyrhauser and myself were far up in the woods rusticating, without any thoughts of business. It is probable that these stories originated persons who are interested creating an impression that pine lands were scarce, and were all being bought up as rapidly as possible, by which means it is expected to corner them. It is hoped, no doubt, that such fables would strengthen prices. I believe, however, that there was a little meeting of lumbermen yere yesterday, but I was not present." "Yes, there was a little meeting of lumbermen here," said J. C. O'Gorman, of Stillwater. Minn., "but it was merely for the purpose of completing a small private dea. Some us gentlemen came down to Mr. Weyrhouser and Senator Sabin. The deal did not amount to more than fifty million feet, and it was a private transaction in which no one was interested. I do not care to say where the tract is situated, because I had very little to do with it, but when saw the newspapers this morning we all laughed at the idea of our meeting to form any combination among lumbermen. Such a thing is impossible. There are too many lumbermen. Why, all over Minnesota there are mills that are turning out twenty thousand feet a day, and you cannot bring so many men together. There has been a boom company organized at Minneapolis among the large logging men, but that is merely for the purpose of cutting a sluice around the falls and getting the logs further down the river before they are sawed. Mr. Weyrhouser had nothing to do with that, for his interests all lie on the other

OBITUARY.

Seth Green, the Well-Known Fish Commissioner of the State of New York. ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 19 .- Fish Commissioner Seth Green died at 1 A. M.

Seth Green was born at Rochester, N. Y., in 1817. He was about eighteen years of age when he began a series of experiments in the waters of Lakes Ontario and Michigan, with the view to devise the most effective method of taking fish for market. After having been twenty-nine years in business as a fisherman he bought, in the year 1864, a portion of Caledonia creek, and began the artificial propagation of fish. In a short time, as the results of experiments with brook trout, he discovered the dry method of the impregnation of spawn. Mr. Green succeeded in the artificial propagation of shad in the Connecticut river in 1867, a feat never before accomplished, and which he was induced to try by the New England fish commission. A fishery commission was appointed in New York State in 1868, and Mr. Green made one of the three commissioners. Two years afterward he resigned this position and became superintendent of the commission which owns a hatchery at Caledonia and another at Cold Spring Harbor. Other Deaths.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.-Judge Wm. W. Wilshire died at his home in this city to-day from congestion of the brain. During the war he served in the Union army as major of volunteers. He was appointed chief-justice of Arkansas in 1868, which office he resigned three years later. He was given a certificate of election to the Forty-third Congress, but his seat was contested and his competitor was declared elected.

HAZELTON, Pa., Aug. 19 .- George B. Markle, the head of the firm of George B. Markle & Co. operators of the Jeddo, Highland and Oakdale collieries, and one of the earliest operators of this region, died Saturday evening. PHILADELPHIA. Pa., Aug. 19 .- John C. Lucas.

TARIFF IN THE NORTHWEST.

How the People of the Great Western Cities Regard Protection. E. V. Smallev's St. Paul Letter in New York Press. It is not the fashion in the Northwest to talk of blood-sucking manufacturers drawing the life blood out of the community. On the contrary these people are looked upon as public benefactors. Every town is eager to secure factories in order to diversify industry, increase population and give a market for the farmers. Bonuses in money and lands are subscribed to induce manufacturers to put up plants, pamphlets are printed setting forch the advantages of this, that and the other town for manufacturing, and committees are sent East to confer with firms and companies about the removal of their establishments. The first thing a new town does after its stores are built, its big public echool-house erected and the county-seat question settled, is to agitate the question of securing some sort of a factory. Free traders in the East who think this region & stronghold of their doctrines are greatly mistaken. It a vote could be taken in Minnesota on a straight issue between reasonable protection and free trade or revenue tariff, protection would carry by at least two to one.

I note that the anti-protection counties in this State are those where there are no manufacturing industries, and where the farming population is rather poor and ignorant and largely composed of foreigners who do not read English. Such counties as Washington, with its big manufacturing town of Stillwater; Otter Tail, with its mills and factories at Fergus Falls, and Winons, with its extensive lumber-making interests is the beautiful little city of the same name, are strong for protection, and so are the large cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, each with 175,000 people, and each full of protected industries. On the other hand, where you find a rather backward county, with a grass-grown county-seat town, depending wholly on trade with the farmers, you are sure to hear of the oppressions of the tariff system, particularly if there is a starveling Democratic newspaper printed there. The Scandinavians, a large element in Minnesota's population, are disposed to free-trade notions where they live on farms, but are strong protectionists in the towns. Their attitude as a body is one of progress on this question, and they are, as a rule, steady-going

North St. Paul is a suburb of St. Paul, based wholly on manufacturing. Two years ago the site of the town was all open field and pasture. Now there are 4,000 people there and a dozen factories in operation making stoves, saddles, organs, agricultural implements, etc. Not one of these factories would have been built if there had been no protection for American industry in the tariff laws. The free-traders need not send any of their documents to North St. Paul telling about the way Eastern manufacturers are oppressing the West. There is no demand in that place for such literature. The operatives who are paying for their bomes by monthly installments from their wages have no patience with the tariff reformers who want to throw the market open to English and German cheap

I have been surprised at the extent of the protection sentiment in Dakota. Dakota is a Territory whose people are almost wholly engaged in agriculture. It has 650,000 inhabitants, 4,246 miles of railroad, 325 newspapers and 5,055 school-teachers, and is kept out of the Union by the Democratic party from fear that it would vote for a Republican President if admitted. If protection hurts the farmer Dakota would be unanimous for free trade. Yet I find strong, intelligent discussions of the tariff question from a protection stand-point in the Republican newspapers of the Territory, and read of debating clubs taking up the question, and the joint political meetings, where it is the only topic of the speeches. Evidently there are a great many Dakota farmers who know that protection does not burt them, and who want the American system continued so as to encourage manufactures to start in the towns where they sell their products. If Dakota could vote next fall the Democrats could not come within sight of carrying it on the tariff issue Cleveland has raised. Montana is a Democratic Territory, ready to be admitted as a State. She has the richest gold mine in the world, the Drum Lummon, and the richest silver mine in the world, the Granite Mountain. She has also immense flocks of sheep, and her politics are turning on wool this year. The free-wool clause of the Mills bill has raised the mischief with the reliable Democratic majorities in the Montana counties. The Democratic papers try to dodge the issue, but the gress this year to proclaim her hostility to the Democratic low tariff and no tariff scheme. There is a great iron mining district on the Vermillion range in Minnesota, north of Lake Superior, and another in the Gogebic range in northern Wisconsin, south of the lake, lapping over into Michigan. These mines employ thousands of laboring men. Other thousands are employed in transporting the ore by lake and rail to the furnaces of Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Still other thousands are employed in converting the ore into iron and steel. The iron market is dull at present, by reason of the falling off in the demand for railway building. Prices have fallen to the lowest point at which iron masters can run their mines and works and pay living American wages to their workmen. The tariff reformers say that the prices must go still lower, because the cheap Spanish ores manufactured in England and Scotland with cheap labor and brought to our shores in cheap foreign ships could undersell our iron and it not for protective WATA duties. But if we are to use this cheap foreign iron and steel, what is to become of these thousands of workingmen and their families? "Let them go into other vocations." says the free-trader. But there is no demand for their labor in other vocations. "Then let them go upon the land." But they have no land to go upon, and, besides they are not farmers by trade and could not make a living on the soil. It amounts, then, to this: That they must take fifty or seventy-five cents a day for their labor, orstarve. It is needless to add that the iron districts of the Northwest are not in favor of free

THE TWO CAMPAIGNS.

The Basis of Each as Officially Stated-The

New York Mail and Express The now famous "interview" with Mr. Calvin S. Brice, chairman of the Democratic national campaign committee, has had the effect of disclosing the conflict between the men who are responsible for the success of Mr. Cleveland's campaign and Mr. Cleveland himself. The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Times, which is earnestly supporting Mr. Cleveland, says that "those familiar with the facts in the case, and with some recent private utterings, know full well that the Brice interview is correct in every particular," and that "it was written from a feeling that a publication might arouse the leaders of the Democratic party." This is the situation of the Democratic campaign, as it stands exposed and confessed by the leaders and organs of that campaign to-day. The Democratic campaign managers see clearly fuel sure of their reward, in case of success, or the battle is lost already. On the other hand, how does the Republican campaign look from the juside? As to that our highest and best authority is our candidate, General Harrison. In one of his admirable speeches yesterday he frankly disclosed his ideas as to the campaign, and his ideas will control it, and ought to control it, because they are such as to command the admiration of all true Republicans and the respect of all intelligent and respectable Democrats. Here is what Gen. Harrison said to the Indianians who have known him from his young manhood:

that the President must in some way allay the popular apprehensions justly aroused by his free-trade message, and must let the "workers"

My Friends-The man who does not believe that the issues of the campaign have taken a very deep hold upon the minds and upon the hearts of of the American people would do well to come and stand with me and look into the faces of the masses who gather here. I know nothing of the human face if I do not read again in your faces and eyes the lesson I have read here from day to day, and it is this: That thinking, intelligent, God-fearing, and self-respecting citizens of this country believe there are issues at stake that de mand their e-rnest effort [applause.] A campaign that is one simply of party management, a campaign by committees and public speakers, may fail; but a campaign to which the men and women of the country give their unselfish and earnest efforts can never fail. [Great applause.] It is no personal interest in the is the belief that questions are involved affecting your prosperity and the prosperity of your neighbors, affecting the dignity of the Nation, affecting the generation to which you will presently leave the governmen which our fathers built and you have saved. [Ap-

We appeal to the intelligent and conscientious Democrats whether there is not all the difference between the two campaigns-as confessed by the Democratic managers and stated by General Harrison-that there is between hor and trickery; between great principles policies universally accepted Republicans and a party divided the great issue of the campaign; between appeals to the intelligence and patriotism of American voters in behalf of American principles and policies, and a campaign in which Mr. Cleve-land's free-trade issue is kept in the background and he is urged to help the fraud.

These are the two campaigns. Which should command the respect and support of honest and
